

Children's National Medical Center plays a vital role in improving the health of children in the nation's capital, across the country, and around the world. The generosity of individual donors, corporations, and community organizations makes it possible for our experts to tackle the health care needs of children today and lead the way to tomorrow's cures.

In your honor, a gift has been made by to Children's National to help us give health and hope to families in the hospital during the holidays—and every day of the year.

*When you're sick, all you want is to feel better again—especially when you're a child spending the holidays in the hospital.
The picture on the front of this card was created by a child as part of an arts program at Children's National.*
